THAT POPULAR MAJORITY. OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

BLACK IGNORANCE OR WHITE DE-PRAVITY. - LOYALTY OR "RE-

AND YOU TAKES YOUR CHOICE. WASHINGTON, Nov. 27, 1870. Isn't it about time to request our Democratic friends to cease harping on that wanderful popular majority. Mr. Tilden is confident "that the will of the people inanifested so druhledly by a popular his jorlly of more than a quarter of a million of votes" will seat blur in the White House, notwithstanding the lack of that one electoral. The World regales its readers daily with the extraordinary statement that whatever corrupt Louisiana Returning Boards may do, the fact of that popular majority remains, and will prevail against united ballots and bayouets. That rampant chicken of the Post reaches us dally with a still jubillant air, doubtless fed from the mush of that preposterous majority. I had in tended to write you this evening a thrilling effusion, in my usual graphic and mapproachaide style, wherein a due consideraflor to an undeclifed polltical contest would have suggested a subdued and meanmitted expression of opinion, but assuming my wisest expression, preparatory to the reception of Inspiration, I pick up the morrlig paper and read that Guy, Hendricks dimed on Saturday with Gov. Tilden, and to a reporter who intercepted him on his way to the dining-room, he was kind enough to remark that the soler seuse of the people, added to the fact of a popular majority of more than a quarter of a milllon, etc., etc. It is enough. The remark of the gentleman who considered it a crylug shame that Louislana ami Florbia should, by the votes of a lot of ignorant negroes, decide the election of a President of the United States, recurs and suggests an inquiry as to whether there may not be two sides to this case. The New England States have ever led the van in the attention Taid to educating the people, and in these States there exists a lower percentage of Illiteracy than in any other section of the Union, Of 202,481 vhildren in Massachusetts, in 48%, between the ages of five and fifteen, the average attendance at school was 210,248, or more than seventy per cent. This State gove Mr. Haves a majority of over 41,000, and the balance of New England, with the exception of formecticut, a unifed majority of 53,000, newhich Vermont, which stands second only to Massachusetts in the superiority of its public schools, contributed

In the three States of which New York forms the centre, we find this centre exerclsing an influence whileh recreomes the will of the roundry. New York city will his 60,000 people who can neither read of write; its immense criminal population its confrateruity of gamblers and rumsellers and disreputable persons who can read and write, gave Mr. Tilden a majority of 54. 600. Brooklyn, which is scarcely less bur dened with the lowest classes, added 47,000. But turning to the balance of the State where exists a compulsory school system and a low percentage of illiteracy, we find It glvlng Mr. Hayes a popular majority of

New Haven in Connecticut and Jersey flty in New Jersey, morally in the same category with New York city and governed by its influence, cast their majority of votes lu the same direction, and in sufficient numbers to overcome the vote of the balance of their States. To illustrate: take a map of the three States of Connecticut, New Jersey and New York, and stake off a section which shall embrace the countie of Fairfield and New Haven in Connectlcut; of New York and Klugs in New York, and of Essex and Hudson in New Jersey. all within a radius of twenty miles from Trinity Church. These six counties have a population of about two million sonisagainst four utllions in the eighty-three countles which make up the balance of the three States. In these slx counties Mr. Tilden had a majority of, nearly 90,000; in the remaining eighty-three countles, or which sixty-one were carried by the Republicans, Mr. Haves had a majority of over 45,000.

In Pennsylvarda the common school system has been adopted in its widest extent. In a population of about four millions, but one small district is without a free school and more than $8,000,000 are expended an nually for valueational purposes. The Republican majority is not far from 20,000 In Ohlo, Illinois, Indlana, Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota, education is free to all and in some cases compulsicry. There Is less of the ignorant foreign population Hill & Mackintosh, Amorneys for the Hedthan in the East, and a lower percentage is Illiteracy than even New York or Pennsylvania. The Republican met majority in they had so posted themselves in the matthese States is 52,000. It is a remarkable statement, but a truthful one nevertheless, that lu lowa, which has the smallest proportion of foreign population, the smallest debt, and the lowest percentage of illiteracy cans carried ninety-three counties out of only when some part of it is printed in the and Hall, corner, all of Boston. in Congress, every Circuit Judge, fourtee nber, and gave Mr. Hayes a majority of 59,300, while Indiana, with the greates sereentage of Illiteracy, was the only Western State carried by the Democrats.

Continuing westward, we follow a path which the public school has created, and where wealth, prosperity and compulsory education go hand in hand. "In the heart f the Rocky Mountains," has remarked a stinguished economist, " and in the midst of the gold and sliver-hearing peaks of Neada and todorado the free school is the entinel of civilization." The most spleniid American High School building is to be ound in Omaha, and no village of the duff and hardy miners is without its jurbic school. The percentage of illiteracy in Kansas, Nebraska, Nevada, Colorado, Oregen and California is less than six per cent? and their Republican majorities aggregate 45,000. Of the twenty-two Northern States we have mentioned eighteen of them have given Mr. Hayes a popular majority of 275,000, and three have given Mr. Tilden a popular majority of 45,000, leaving 230,000 in favor of the Republicans. THE SOUTH.

Crossing the Mason and Dixon line, w find the solution of the national problem in these figures, which are taken from the Census of 1879. Of the 5,644,534 persons in the United States who can neither read or write, 4,117,589 are found in the South ern States! Nor are these all blacks by any means, the proportion being as 60 black to II white. In all of the Southern States an attempt was made, while their reorganization was in the hands of Congress, to lutrediane a free school system. Money was appropriated to fulld schoolionses, and teachers sent from the Northern States, the children collected, and separate schools for black and white lustiinted in every Southern State. So long as these States were in the hands of Republi cans their educational progress was rapid and beneticial, and the free school system semed destined to secure a tirm foothold a the soil which had spurned it beretofore s tulsebievous and delusive. Hut the govermment of these States soon reverted to he Democrats, and with the defeat of the Republicans was swept away everything avoring of Northern ideas or principles tiergia closed her public schools in 1872. and they have never been reopened. West Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee and vice; that lustwail of being innocent and Southern Missouri, extending from the heinless, is instinctively and intrinsically Atlantic to the Mississippi, the educational uitbook is worse than hopeless," says the Commissioner in 1875. "Not one in six cities, the disreputable districts of large of the people can read or write; and every towns." New Hampshire 54. Massachtisetts (21. Rhode Island 85.

As the common school and the press are ndissolubly united in the physical progress of the country, a comparison is invited. In Georgia, with a population of 1,250,000 here are 123 newspapers with a circulation of 14,419,388; in Massachusetts, with a population of 1,500,000, there are 280 peas sapers, with a circulation of 107,691,952,traly seven copies of a newspaper at printed yearly in Texas for each inhabitant in Georgia 12; in Ohio 35; in Pennsylvania 67; in Massachusetis 94. The total num ber of publications in North Carolina, says Lawrence, would allow only one paper b each inhabitant every three mouths; New York prints tld coples a year for each of its people. And it is along this illiterate belt that the Demogratic majorities mount up to mor than 300,000! To the sum of invigorated reason and southern illiteracy add the product of northern deprayity, and the result is—that popular Democratic majority.

resh Waler Sallore. ttur brother editor of the Norfolk Coun-Corrette, of Hyde Park, improves the ocrasion of the recent storm, to air his malutheal knowledge, and gives the following "thrilling" particulars of the effects of the storm on Nepouset Biver in that section: "On Tuesday morning, 'Howse's Wharf' presented a rather (Hapldated and forsaken appearance, one or two of the rails belog netually bent double, another completely gone, and the heavy coat of paint put on certainly somewhere inside of a hundred years, almost entirely washed away by the unceasing dash of the wild impetuous waves and the furious driving rain; but we cannot truthfully say that it looks much worse than it has for the past half rentury. "Hullard's Landing" wears an unusual dismal aspect; immense quantities of sticks pelities and drift-weed being thrown upon its precipitous and rocky banks,-a thrilling evidence of the tremendons power of the storm-king, enabling the localities spectators to form some faint idea of the terrible extent at which the tempest must have raged in the middle of the river. A that-heat which lay at anchor on this dreadful night within a few feet of the excited erowd, was an oldert of intense interest. At times, it seemed as if the frall bark was doomed, she being swiftly driven towards the ragged cliffs, and again would yeer round and shoot off to seaward. Provideritially her new patent cables, held, and gust, than a sudden current of cold air the only injury she sustained was having gently meandering about his limbs and penher sculling-hole formout, and the raging sea was mercifully deprived of its trembling auticipated victims. Ilm the most appail more, in a ride of as many miles, is enough ing effects of this gale, and the most Irealful to behold, was between "Carlbridge" and "Cow-island," Here old Horeas expanded his lungs to the utmost, nothing intervening to shield the poor miserable informules who might be exacsed to his howling, shricking and merciess blasts. Huge waves rose mountains tomed to live in tents, or out-doors, or "in high, chasing each other with horrid glee in rapid succession, bursting upon the excuse me, tadies-are at the head and welrd, rocky shore, in a deafening and continnous roar. Gerasimally one of these compase the grand army of confirmed lumense volumes of water would encount-"door-forgetters," as I call them. No mater a stray lily-pad, and then the scene was sublimely grand. Nothing could witha rule seem to have an utter contempt for er a stray hly-pad, and then not seem was a rule seem to have an utter contempt for doors; it makes no difference whether or not they are encumbered with bundles or the like, it is just the same, the door is invariably ignored by the "deah eweatyahs." Do stop the practice. "Shot the door!"

Ahoust an Accident.

If ever a person had a hairbreadth escape from a horrible death, Mrs. Magnire, of South Braintree, is that person. Monday afternoon, as she was walking upon the railroad track between the Braintree and East Braintree sintions, hearting nowards the latter place, she was perceived by the engineer of the inward 445 accommodation train from Cohasset, who, as the woman did not seem to head the approach of bis train but still proceeded along the track towards him, blew a warning whisthe and shut off steam. Hearing the whistle, Mrs. Magnire stepped from the track towards him, blew a warning whisthe and shut off steam. Itearing the whistle, Mrs. Magnire stepped from the track upon one side, at which, seeing all clear and supposing that the woman would remaid in hor position of safety, the vugineer. ejected from his mouth by in her position of safety, the engineer violence of the gale.

EDWARD ROSENFELD.

At Herekhon for some time past it has been the practice of the 4c having charge of the freight trains which stop at this station to await the passing of the passenger trains, to hand off on a slide track, and when their trains have proved too long to be got altegother off on a slogle track. Instead of dividing them and using two side tracks, they have usually allowed the rear of their trains to remain on the main track until the passenger train had reached the depot, and then pulled shead so ma to afford a clear track before the passenger train when the latter should be ready to start. Last Saturday, says the Gazette, orders were issued from headquarters to discontinue this prattee, and to leave the main track entirely clear on the approach of a passenger train. Circumstances showed on Monday that this order was given none too soon, for in the afternown as the three o'chock train approached the depot, the rails being very wet at the time, it was found impossible to use the brakes effectively and the train sid nearly down to School street before it was brought to a halt. Had the rear cars of the freight train been left bapping upon the main track as prechainly, a serious collishui must certainly resuited.

APPLE-DUMPLINGS.

What the plum-pudding is to Ch England," I said to my wife, at the same time loosening a latten or two of my waistecat, "the apple-dumpling." looking complacently down upon one lying, fragrant and steaming, on the plate before me, "is to New England. It is the main-stay, as a sailor might say, of the dessert. Indeed, it is not upossible to make off of it an entire dinner. It bears no likeness to the dummery and pretty little tiny kickshaws of French extraction, which please the polate of your dainty hearding-school Miss; but it is a right down honest, earnest, thumping sort of a dish. which our grandmothers, in the good old times, were not ashamed to place before a hungry man. Without pos sessing the richness, indigestibility, and costliness of the plum-pudding, it is quite as satisfying to the appetite, and much more healthful. Besides, it las the reputation of being a national dish. and as such merits our heartiest smiport. It was not known in England, as I have been assured by very good authorities-Peter Pindar to the contrary notwithstanding-nutil after the Revolutionary war; and the story of the firs time the Britishers partook of it, as recorded in the veritable History of the Island of Nantucket, written by one of he Cattins, is well worth recounting. I remember having heard my great-grandfather relate it many years ago, and I was impressed by its air of truthfulness. and, regretting that the history wherein it was contained had never been published. I resolved, if ever the opportunity offered of putting it in print.

would the so." " Which resolution," said my wife. · I think you must have forgotten as quickly as your secur to have forgotten the dampling before you."

"thood gracious!" I exclaimed, "1 wouldn't forget my dampling for anything; but do you know that rold dumplings are very good, and that frozen ones when warmed over are delicious? In Nantucket, as I have heard my grandmother say, the thrifty housewives of that sandy little island used to cook inclimidreds of them in the fall. as they did their minee-pies and doughnuts, and store, them away for use during the winter." "That is a likely story," said my wife.

"It is only the beginning of a story," replied: " wait muil I've tinished this dumpling, and then you stall hear it." Whereupon 1 set to with a will, and soon had put the dumpling where all good apple-dumplings like to go. Then turning to my wife, I sabl: "It was during one of the latter years of the war of the Revolution, in the mouth of December, that a British frigate apneared off the coast of Nantucket; and after going through various nautheal proceeded to cannonade the island. But it should not be cause for grief : rather think of them as happily freed from the turnoil and petty strife of the never-ending battle over the almighty dollar, which we unfortunates who are left behind are compelled perfore to earry ou; and rejoice that they have been thus early called from the cankering rares of earth to a higher life, beyond.

Thanksgiving in Braintree passed off with its accustomed quiet. The usual church services were held, the stores and places of business closed their doors early. and from norm till twilight the streets were deserted and all were intent first upon their dinners and second upon the digestion thereof. In the evening there was rather more stirring about, one of the chief points of attraction being the concert at the Town Hall, given by the Swedish Quartette, of Boston, assisted by other well-known yocalists. About a dozen choice selection were rendered in a manner thoroughly to the taste of the amlience present.

WEYMOUTH HOUSE. Matters and Things about Town.

Conductor Paul W. Jackson has, so far recovered from his recent serious throat Illness that on Monday morning he made his opperance upon his usual train. His many friends among the travelling public were highly pleased at the apparition of his tamiliar face.

"The Braintree Chural Society" had its second weekly gathering in the Town Hall on Friday evening last, a very satisfactory number being present. Prof. Whiting, of Hoston, hamilted the butson. The society now has a sidiscribed fund of some $1 and it is proposed to levy a quarterly assess ment of $2 upon the gentlemen and $1 upon the ladies, in future, to defray necessary expenses.

There was a change among the barbers the other day, and the result is that South Braintree has another barber, who has limited in one of the vacant rooms in Holbrook Block.

The suggestion is made—a very good one. ou-that the old High School Association be revived and a yearly reunion held in the Town Hall. In many other towns these gatherings are held regularly and are occasions of great enjoyment. There should be no good reason why Braintree is belded in this respect. It is not too late to have a meeting called and arrangements made for 🖁 at least a social gathering of the alumni of the school; and it is respectfully suggested to the present Principal that if he will help set the ball in motion by lds influence, and give the project his support, a very pleasant reunion of old classmates may be held at flitle expense of numey or time. It was much as it had been, and we loped away, sometimes without a living thing in sight save the lizards and owls, then through bands of cattle and horses thousands in number, and each marked with the neculiar brand of its owner. San Juan Capistrano is a larger place than San Luis Rey,-more business, more houses, more enterprise. Do you ask why? Because more Americans have settled in there. They always carry enterprise with them and in a measare wake up the dormant energies of the sleepy-headed Mexicans, but only in a measure. It is principally situated about a smare, the four sides of which are bounded by red-tiled adobe buildings stores, taverns, groceries and a barber's

LITERATURE.

| For the Gazette. | BACRED LYRICS GOD'S PEACE.

God's peace-not that which speaks, and lo! The lempest stiffs its angry breath; The mighty ocean stays its flow And takes the pulseless form of death.

God's neace-not that which settles down

And in the lap of twilight rests,

When day lays off her radiant crown

And gilds anew earth's rugged crests, God's peace—not that whose soothing word Hushes the anthem of the grare, So sweetly in the sunset heard,

God's peace-not that which spreads a field Of ermine over carth's wide maze, Hidling her throbbing pulses, cold. And still, and lifeless to the gaze

Hespeaking thus a mightier love

God's peace-not that which grasps life's frame And stills its silent, ceaseless flow, In death; for lack of kindlier name We call this change, we little know

God's peace-that like a river flows into the restless, joyless breast; Which into blest assurance grows, And gives the long, long waited rest.

Comes in the fearful storne to quell,—
At whose calm voice all fears depart, God's peace-which bideth not in death, But lifts the soul to newer life; That leashes not the lab'ring breath,

God's peace-which, when life's surges swell

And threaten fierce the struggling heart,

But helps the fainting through the strife. God's peace-that lifts its holder up, And seats him at his Father's feet : Gives him to drink joy's flowing cup, Where love and trust make joy complete.

God's peace—that fills the lunging breast, And dissipates the last sad feat; Gives now, and ever, perfect rest;-Be mine, sweet peace, so true and dear,

THE BIRTH OF THE STORY.

We care not how forcely the winds may blow, or how cold and deep, is the pure white snow, or here we all gather in safety, con know, and we listen to the often-odd tale again, f the winsome quildens and gallant men, If the fairy's abode, and ogre's den. Oh, where do they come from, so fair and so bright they sparkle like glants of the rainbow light, or thow in sweet music, this Christmas night?" And the mother, dear, with a gladsome smile, and looked down on that tace, so free from guile. and she said, as she gazed in the deep blue eyes So placid and still, like the lake that lies Reflecting the glow of the summer skies,

My darling, whence comes it, the blush of the ros its perfume so fragrant that ceaselessly flows, r the beauty that fees in the twilight glows? Or the inclody born in the song of the bird, Vs in the wild woodland its notes are loard! They tell me a story, and this is the word. In a tar-oft land, in the older days, Was a garden rare, full of pleasant ways, Where two children lived, so the story says, n the richest profusion, forever in bloom, And skies that were never in darkness or gloom There were paths that ever unfolded to view The tarest scenes, that were ever new, While birds of bright crests through the toliage flet With all that could speak through the sense

Hose children could roam through this fair. As tree as the breezes that frolicked there. The fould mother saw the standowed brow. The languid air and the step so slow, And aresimely saugist the cause to know My darlings, she said, "is it all for nought,

Is there might improvided that wealth may buy That labor may gain, or affection supply, The wide world through, in the sea, or the sky?" There is nothing, kind mother, that you can provide, But we find in abundance, on every side

That this beautiful garden for you has been wrought

And these precious treasures from tar have been Little Ponds, it was believed that the impediment of the summit level might Our senses are filled, but our hearts are void. There is something still lacking, we cannot deny, That wealth cannot turnish, may love cannot buy; We wander unhappy, and cannot tell why." The mother gazed upward in trouble and paint.

And wished for her own happy chalatood again, That those days might come back with their halo

When the golden birds, with their phunage so bright, That she night be self by a cluld once more, And wander again on youties beauteful shore, Thus reading the secter that childhood bore As she gazed, a shadow came over the sky, As a wonderful form thew rapidly high. Twas a golden bird or most brilliant lose. take stars of gold in the heavens of blue It came like a thisk in its sudden tlight : And the clotdren tooked on in almost fright. It stayed but a moment, and then was gone; They wandled it fild far in the distance it shone Like a glittering stat in the heavenly zone. But, wonder of wonders; in the spot where it lay,

A golden egg shot its brilliant ray, What the clubbren thought, it is hard to say, They toucked it su gently; "Tis warm, mother dear, What a beauty it is, so smooth and so clear; "And the mother knew that her wish was near, She touched it, and lo, as her touch, the shell, And then came from its bosom, a wondrous spell It was not a bird, yet it traversed the air;

It was not a beast, yet it roamed everywhere; And even the secrets of ocean lay bace. More gorgrous of phumage that ever was hird; When it spoke, every lone was a silver word. And it ever more dwelt in the garden rate i To remove from her children their burden of Its name is a sected, yet you may guess, From its pleasant speech, and its brilliant dress, And its power, that all children's hearts confess Oh, fancy, you call it, the skill that gives to the story the charm by which it lives, And the Christmas tale the ctedit receives. 1 Thence come the stories of wonder and power, so cleaningly told in the evening hour, (if the castle grim, and the lady's bower And the good mother's heart went out as she told to het darlings the legend alle gathered of old, And sought in sweet words, its truth to untold. My shild, in this garden, the world you shall see Ur no the hand of its Maker as turns can be, And the children are people like you and me the mother who cares for her children so well,

BRAINTREE DEPARTMENT.

ELLIOT'S LETTER.

Now that there is a whilespread movement, silmulated by the late horrible these tre disaster in Brooklyn, N. Y., towards rembering mildle buildings and halls more easy to escape from in case of a paule among an andlence, would it not be well lo look at home a little and see if Brainlree's halis are as well provided with convendent means of egress as they should be? The writer has made no attempt at an extended examination of the matter, but no doubt there is room for improvement. A fundamental safeguard for all halls and theatres is that the principal doors-thuse of exit in particular-should open outward, instead of hiward, as Is sometimes the case. In any case, a little precaution can do no harm; and the time may come when such acts will hear good fruit.

Temperance Redivivas. There is a movement on foot for the renewal of the interest felt in Braintree last Whiter and spring, in the temperance question, and so far the boiles have taken the Initiative. A largely-attended meeting was held in the Town Hall, Sunday evenling, umler the ansplces of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. Mrs. Abby Storer Doutney, of Mahlen, was the lirst speaker. She had evidently carefully committed to memory her address, and she had a wearisome amount of statistics, while her delivery was not particularly effective on account of a certain stiffness which it

Miss Jennie Musters, of Boston, who followed Mrs. Doutney, and who during the evening gave some pleasing youal selections In connection with a select choir composed of local talent, spoke much more effectively, all things considered, than her predecessor, Not that her sentences were so aptly worded, her similes and illustrations so striking, or her voice and manner of delivery se well studied, for they were not; but There was an earnestness of purpose in what she said, a depth of feeling, and above all a persuasive naturalness of speech and action which carried the hearts of the amlience into full sympathy with the speaker. She spoke as if she fell every word she uttered; and her remarks were attentively listened to and lotally applainled. After the reading of a poem, "The First Crusade," by Mrs. L. P. Holbrook, a call was made from the platform for Mr. Sam uel L. Dyer, President of the former Brain tree Reform Club. Mr. Dyer was seated among the audience, in the rear portion of the hall; but he promptly doffed his overcoat and appeared, amid great applause upon the platform. A verbatim report of his remarks would be Interesting without a doubt to Braintree readers of the GA -ZETTE, but lack of space forbids. After alluding techis late illness, he spoke of the determination to which he had arrived to "let his actions speak lomier than his words." Then plunging into the subject in hand he proceeded to speak of the reasons why temperative made no more progress in the town; and he asserted, with bitter emphasis, that one great reason was that prominent cltizens, in society and even in the church, were arrayed upon the other side. With scathing satire the speaker alluled to a church member who had leased a building for a liquor saloon and who has never been called to account for it. Mr. Dyer concluded his address, which had caused not a little excitement among the andience, by sareastically affirming that "we all hope and desire to wear the livery of Heaven;

but deliver me from the shoddy clock that Dea. J. Ward Childs was next called for, but with his usual good sense he took into consideration the lateness of the hour and on that account declined speaking. Rev. Mr. Morrison of the Methodist Church, South Braintree, was not so backward about coming forward, however, and he spoke for several infautes, giving some of his experiences with intemperance and making allusion to the sail case of Rev. Mr. Charplot, who was pastor of the Methodist Church a year or two ago and who since his removal for appling, has, it is said, become confirmed in his cups. Matters and Things about Town. The members of "Butcher Boy 2" had their second annual ball in the Town Hall, Frhlay evening.

Maydower Park is still on the move towards better things. The boot manufactory has been put in operation, and on Saturday morning trains began to stop at the platform which has been constructed in front of the proposed depot site. The children's Centennial, Wednesday evening, was a most charming affair and very satisfactory to all concerned. The programme was as follows:-1. Tableau, Martha and George Washington-Mary Lang and Frankie Holbrook; 2, Recitation by Charlle Hayward, dressed in an Im ported Search cosmine: 3, Tableau, "A Corn Husking:" 4, Reading by Miss Lillie Lane, "The Big Shoe," from Mother Goose, for Grown Folks: 5, Tableau, Highland lads and lassies-Song behind the seems, "O where, tell me where," by Tarrie Sm-Quilting Party; S. John Anderson and 19, Song by Grace Hayward: 11, John Anderson and wite in old-age, accompanied by the singing of John Amberson my Jo. behind the scenes, by Miss Flora Bearing; 12. Reading by Bertha Arnold: 13, Tableau. bleau, -- Ernest Dennett; 16, "The Future

The whole entertainment was admirably namaged under the care of Mrs. John Hill, Mrs. Berry and others, and the mothers who worked so hard to dress their children in the authorated costumes were well repaid, in the amount of enjoyment attacked The Temperature Meeting

Mrs. Jessle H. Rupert, of Newmarkel, Va., lectured in Phenix Hall, Friday even lug, Dec. 15th. Subject: "The Shenandoals Valley during the War." The late issuing of circulars left many without notice so that the attendance was much smaller than anticipated.

The "Boston Branch Clothing Store," which has been run in Daly's Block for several months since, has been closed, the proprietors having found some more fruitful field of labor. Frank Witherell, who escaped with a iorse and wagon, together with several humired feet of rope, which he had taken from the stable of Mr. Davis Smith, on North Avenue, on the night of Nov. 7th, has lately been discovered in the Cambridge house of correction, where he is serving a term of three months for the larceny of a coat. He pleads gulity and leads to the return of a part of the goods, the remainder of which had long since been discovered.

Mr. Henry Baker is rebuilding the ic house which was burned, near Cushing's Poml, Nov. 11th.

The town expense of keeping tramps i much less serious this senson. The preseut rate is fourteen cents per day for each man, which compares very favorably with the lifty or seventy-live cents previously pull. They are now accommodated at the almshouse, under the charge of Mr. Alger, the superintendent, who has discovered the remarkable fact, that all who have come under his charge have been "Thlen

HINGHAM.

Last Thursday, a young man calling himself Timothy McCarthy, called at the livery stable of Mr. Gen, Hasselt, aml represented to him that he was dispatched by his nucle, (a man well known to Mr. B., to lilre a beam for his nucle to go to a funeral. The procured the team and left the stable; the next that was heard from him was the recognition of the team by an oflicer of Station 5, of Hoston, who arrested him, and he was carried to Hinghma, but on account of his youth was allowed to leave without further legal proceedings. The second lecture in the home course was delivered Tuesday evening, by the Rev. H. A. Miles, the subject being "Mac anley." The lecture was delivered in very interesting manner. Mr. Miles treating his subject in a masterly style. Last Sunday evening the Principal o the Thaxter St. Grammar School, Mr. Hosea G. Goodwin, received a visit from his jupils, it being the anniversary of his birthday, who left many useful and valualde testimonials of their regard for kim. SOUTH WEYMOUTH. Christmas, with all its tide of pleasant memories, its circles of home reunions, its interchange of friendship's tributes, has passed, and the chords of our hearts have not ceased to vibrate with the thrill of pleasure those memories, those roundous, those gifts, awakened. On Sabbath morning, Rev. Mr. Stanton anticipated the nearness of the anniversary so dear to the Catholle heart, from its sarred significance, ami each year becoming dearer to the Protestant heart, from the social use to which the day is placed, by the Scripture read laboring men and women, all through the and the sermon preached, while the choir of the church, morning and attermion. sang Christmas Voluntaries. Arrangements had been made for a social gather ing of the people, and in the afternoon of Monday nearly one hundred of the children of the purish came to the vestry of the church, where a committee of ladies and gentlemen were ready to welcome them, and lead them in those games appropriate to childhood, till five whick, when they were invited to the spacious dining half under the vestry, when a bountiful supper of cysters, meats, cakes, ples and all those little daluties so dear to the child's heart, was provided, and served to them by a committee of the older people. At about six eclock the older scholars of the school and the people of the society, began to assemble, and sat down to an elegant repast. It was estimated by the took supper, which was furnished freely and loungeonsly, so that much remained.

This had been arranged in the small vestry by Messrs A. Tirrell, S. S. Mrs. S. S. Spear, Mrs. Hobart and Mrs. Whitman. And the leanty of the arrangement attested to the faithfulness of the committee. The presents were very unmerous and very general, many calling forth much fun from the young men and ladies, from their matual hits. Among the presents we noticed some beautiful mottoes given to Mr. and Mrs. which followed the distribution of presents
